

Rice Market Report

Italy: This week prices are rising, the reason is that unfortunately there is a delay in sowing the rice fields, there is still 30% of rice to sow, the new harvest will therefore arrive late.

Farmers are doing their job as farmers and currently, even if they have availability of certain varieties, they are not selling them, because they prefer to wait until September.

In any case the new harvest will not arrive before October, if they must liquidate paddy, they will liquidate it in September and not before as expected.

Previously we thought that if they really had to sell off and get low prices to get rid of paddy rice, they would do it by August. Now they have at least one more month and therefore today they are raising prices.

It must also be said that there are additional requests due to the forecast that there will be no possible coverage in September, so it's quite a chain.

By-product prices remain stable.
